“Suddenly everyone wants a white, gleaming, Hollywood smile”

Dr. Louis Orsatti and his wife Debbie, founders of the Orsatti Dental Group, know what it is like to make someone feel good about them self. Their practice, which has expanded to include three dentists, continues to grow and prosper with new cosmetic dental technologies and techniques, which greatly improve the look of the teeth and smile.

The Orsatti Dental Group sees patients of all ages and provides a wide range of dental care including routine cleanings and gum disease treatment, white fillings, all porcelain crowns, veneers and Invisalign. The Orsattis opened the practice focusing on treating each patient as an individual and providing a caring, professional environment using the latest available technology.

“Suddenly everyone wants a white, gleaming, Hollywood smile,” says Dr. Orsatti. A great smile can give the appearance of looking healthier, younger, successful and increase confidence and self-esteem. Deciding to change the appearance of your smile is the first step.

Veneers, all porcelain crowns and Invisalign, are the latest specialties that Dr. Orsatti draws on to provide more options in his cosmetic dentistry practice.

Veneers are thin sheets of porcelain that cover the front of the tooth, correcting discolorations or chips in the teeth, or reshaping teeth to look better, larger or straighter. Performed by a skilled and experienced dentist, they are truly a form of artwork and can provide the perfect smile.

Dr. Orsatti begins the process of making veneers by first taking photographs and models of the teeth and deciding what changes need to be made. Once the new look is agreed upon with the patient, the actual work begins in the patient's mouth. Dr. Orsatti works diligently to insure that the color, shape and size of the veneers will provide the patient with the desired smile.

Jaime Grisham fell and broke two teeth as a child and turned to Dr. Orsatti for veneers to renew the teeth. “Dr. Orsatti was meticulous in everything he did with the veneers, including getting the color and shape just right,” Jaime says. “He was always caring about what I thought and my feelings about how it looked,” she notes. Jaime praises Dr. Orsatti's office staff and environment as very caring, flexible and always working to keep the needs of the patient in mind. “I've gotten tons of compliments on my smile,” says Jaime. She's also recommended a number of friends to the practice

“We see a lot of patients who are in their mid-40s or older. They have put their kids through college and are now doing something for themselves. They are turning to cosmetic dentistry to get the smile they always wanted.” said Debbie. “It is exciting for us to see people go out and show off what we have done for them. It is an investment, and having a beautiful smile gives our patients an edge in the business world,” she adds.

While Dr. Orsatti enjoys working with veneers, he has also had great success with Invisalign, the latest technology of straightening teeth that works without traditional brackets and wires. The patented system uses a series of clear, removable aligners to gradually reposition teeth. The aligners are generally not visible in the mouth; they are made of clear plastic and are smooth and comfortable. They don't irritate the mouth or gums and are removable, making it easier to eat and brush your teeth. The patient must have a full set of adult teeth and the dedication to wear the aligners. The Orsatti Dental Group offers a complimentary whitening system treatment to Invisalign patients.

Mark Habenicht originally went to Dr. Orsatti to have his wisdom teeth removed. Dr. Orsatti asked Mark if he'd ever considered straightening his teeth, which he had, but he'd never bothered to do it. Once introduced to Invisalign, Mark was impressed and began using the system to straighten his teeth. “I've used the Invisalign system for over a year and a half,” Mark said, “and the results are great.” Mark says he could have worn Invisalign without anyone ever knowing he was straightening his teeth. “It didn't alter my speech, I don't have metal in my mouth, and with patience, the results have been huge,” Mark adds.

Brittany, a college student, has been a patient at the Orsatti Dental Group since she was a child. Brittany enjoys coming to the practice because she feels comfortable and she likes the family atmosphere.

We, at the Orsatti Dental Group, are proud to have played a part in helping to create her beautiful smile.

Other emerging technologies that are being utilized in the practice are all-porcelain crowns, which remove the dark shadow at the gum line caused by older metal-based crowns. New porcelain crowns are stronger and provide more support for the tooth and have a more appealing cosmetic appearance.

The most rewarding part of their work is the feedback. Debbie Orsatti mentions letters received regularly from patients who are overjoyed with their dental work. “Thank you for making my smile wonderful,” they write.

Dr. Orsatti and his team of dentists still happily do a lot of “routine” dental work, but, they all say, “It's priceless to see a person's life change when they can smile with confidence and are enjoying their teeth.”
